Fig. 3 shows another embodiment of the invention in which the program is adapted to an internet system. There are shown a client computer ~~computer~~ 12 with a monitor 13 and ~~an~~ a printer 15. A browser program 17 is installed in the client computer 12. A service provider ~~provider~~ 14 communicates with both the client computer 12 and a server computer 16 (hereinafter server ~~:server"~~) using ~~uaing~~ any one of the well known languages/protocols, e.g., (but not limited to) html language and http protocol. The network configuration program 18 of of this invention resides in the server 16, The objective ~~objective~~ of the user of the client computer 12 is to generate a complete document dfining a network of connectors and conductors. The document includes a formal (engineering) drawing, parts list, list of materials summarizing cost and schedule. The starting point of the project is a schematic ~~inverschematic~~ drawing of the network. .
